If you have been injured in a violent act, including if you survived childhood sexual abuse, you may be able to get compensation. You might want compensation to recognise the wrongdoing done to you and to recover money you've paid or will need to pay to help you get better.

You might be able to get compensation by:

- making an application to NSW Victims' Services & Support Scheme
- applying to the criminal court when the perpetrator is convicted
- taking legal action against the person and/or institution responsible for your injuries (civil claims)
- applying to an institutional redress scheme
- from 2018 through the Redress Scheme

It is important that you get legal advice about the best option, so contact knowmore

What is the Victims Services & Support?

The Victims Services & Support (VSS) is a government agency that provides information, financial support and support services to victims of crime.

Can I make an application?

If you've been injured in a violent crime, you may be able to apply for assistance. An 'injury' includes psychological or psychiatric harm.

What support can I get?

If you were injured, you can make an application for 'financial assistance' to help you cover the costs of:

- counselling;
- medical treatment;
- loss of earnings, if you were working at the time of the injury;
- justice related expenses, such as the cost for attending court; and
- safety changes.

You may also be entitled to a 'recognition payment' for the trauma experienced as a result of the act of violence.

How long do I have to make a claim?

For claims relating to child sexual abuse, there is no time limit for making an application.

How do I make an application?

You can make an application by contacting VSS on 1800 633 063.

All applications must include specific documents. For example, if you want financial assistance or a recognition payment, you must include a police report or a report from a government authority, such as the Royal Commission into Institutional Responses to Child Sexual Abuse. You also need a medical report confirming any injury you have suffered.

Can I get counselling?

Yes, any victim of a violent crime can get counselling. You can contact knowmore or call the Victim Access Line on 1800 633 063 to discuss your situation.

Does someone have to be charged?

No, the person who injured you does not have to be charged for you to receive financial assistance or a recognition payment from VSS.

Do I have to have made a report to the Police?

If you want financial assistance or a recognition payment, you must report the crime to the Police or a government authority. You still must do this even if the crime happened a long time ago.

What if the person who injured me is deceased?

This does not prevent you from receiving any type of financial payment from VSS.

Will the person who injured me find out?

They might, but only if they are found guilty of the crime they committed and VSS asks the person to pay back some or all of the recognition payment or financial assistance given to you.

New South Wales

Will I have to go to Court?

No, because the decision about whether you can receive a recognition payment or financial assistance is made only on your written application and evidence.

Can I receive support if I have already received money through a civil claim for the same act of violence?

You can still receive counselling from VSS. However, any money you have received for the same act of violence will be taken into consideration if you apply for a recognition payment or financial support

What is an application for Crimes Compensation?

If the person who injured you has been found guilty of the crime, you may be able to make an application for crimes compensation with the court that convicted them at any time after the conviction. There is no time limit for when you may apply after the conviction, but we suggest you seek legal advice as soon as possible, so contact knowmore for legal help.

Taking legal action - civil claim

You might be able to sue the person and/or institution responsible for your injuries in the civil courts. These claims are often called “civil claims”.

How long do I have to make a civil claim?

If you experienced child abuse in New South Wales, there is no time limit for making a civil claim. “Child abuse” can mean serious physical or sexual abuse but you should contact knowmore to get more advice about this.

These types of applications are very complicated and you should get a lawyer to help you with the claim. knowmore can help you find lawyers who are experienced with childhood sexual abuse.

What is an institutional redress scheme?

Some institutions like the Catholic Church have a complaints process about physical, emotional and sexual abuse committed by their staff or that occurred within their institution.

These complaints go through what is often called an “institutional redress scheme”. Sometimes these schemes will pay compensation and provide other support, such as counselling.

These schemes are very different to the options already talked about. If you would like to know more about them and whether one is available to you, contact knowmore for legal advice.

Redress Scheme for survivors of institutional child sexual abuse

The Australian Government established the National Redress Scheme for survivors of institutional childhood sexual abuse. The scheme commenced on 1 July 2018 and is accepting applications until 30 June 2027. You can find more information or request a form by calling 1800 737 377 or visiting <http://www.nationalredress.gov.au>. The NSW Government have committed to joining the scheme. Other non-government institutions are being encouraged to join.
